Google "Catholic daily audio readings for Mass". You will be on the USCCB website where you can listen to the readings of the day. Hear how the words are pronounced, how the phrases are spaced, the pace of the reading. It's a great way to listen, learn, and improve your skill at proclaiming the Word of God.

Welcome to St. Augustine / St. Peter of Alcantara Parish!

We want to welcome our visitors and new parishioners! Please introduce yourself to Fr. Jegin. We are glad that you are here to share the Liturgy with our community. If you would like to register please complete a form found by the bulletins in the back of church and return it to the Parish office or you may fill out the form online at our website.

Dear Friends in Jesus Christ,

Today's first reading, the story of Adam and Eve, speaks of man and woman as formed in the one creative act of God, and then wrenched apart, each incomplete without the other, each longing for the other in order to be made whole. The mythical drama portrays God as forming us out of the dust of the earth and breathing into us his own Spirit in order that we might live. Behind this magnificent image lies a fundamental truth. We see each experience as the pull of the divine, calling us into dialogue with God, opening up infinite possibilities for our mind and heart, beckoning us to freedom, responsibility and community, calling us to reach beyond where we are in response to the invitation to live in communion with God. At the same time, there is another pull, towards the dust - the dust symbolized here by the serpent. This is the call of the irrational, the temptation to live without discretion, without choice, without freedom, without dialogue and without community.

There are influences in our lives which support the spirit, and there are other influences which hold us back in the dust. We are both, and we do ill to ignore the Spirit as we give in to the call from the dust, just as we do ill to forget that we are from the dust while we follow the Spirit. Today's beautiful Responsorial Psalm is a cry from a sinner, enslaved by the downward pull of the dust, his spirit trapped in the consequences of pride, greed, lust, anger, gluttony, envy and sloth. It is a cry to God for mercy and forgiveness because we cannot free our spirit from the slime. We are like a sea-bird trapped in an oil-slick; however hard we try, we cannot fly.

In the second reading, Paul encourages us to look beyond the horizons of this world and to set our hearts on what is invisible, on God whose love formed us for himself. In the Gospel, we see Jesus coming to unbind us and set us free. But he cannot do so unless he first binds up the strong one who holds us prisoner. Adam and Eve, man and woman, refused to listen to God and to obey his call. Am I going to follow their example and be excluded from paradise? Is my spirit going to be locked in the dust, unable to commune with the divine? Or am I going to hearken to Jesus and learn, like him, to do the will of the Father? The saints who have gone before us demonstrate that it is possible for our spirit to soar to the heights, transforming our body, our feelings, our desires till all is pure and with our whole human being we live in communion of love with God. It is possible. Do I want to dare that journey? Am I willing to go through the fire? What does Jesus need to bind up if he is to set me free? What is holding me bound? What addictions continue to betray me and lock me in my lack of freedom? What habits of sin have I acquired that continue to drive me against my deepest longings?

God knows we all need to be freed from the cosmic sludge that bind us, from the family secrets, from the bad habits that we cling to because we can't imagine being without them, to our own powerless independence, to the opinion of others, and the need to be accepted by our peers. Yes, we all need a new life of freedom and peace and today's readings remind us to pray, for there is one who can liberate us. He calls us to follow him and he does want to clean us, to save us and to take us with him. So accepting the call of the one who can liberate us truly and completely we can be great witness' to Christ through our lives in this world. Thus, let us pray sincerely from our hearts:
Lord, make me an instrument of Your peace. Where there is hatred, let me sow love; where there is injury, pardon; where there is doubt, faith; where there is despair, hope; where there is darkness, light; where there is sadness, joy.

O, Divine Master, grant that I may not so much seek to be consoled as to console; to be understood as to understand; to be loved as to love; For it is in giving that we receive; it is in pardoning that we are pardoned; it is in dying that we are born again to eternal life. May God Bless You All.
